Multiple arrests by police community foot patrol

London police's community foot patrol made three arrests in the downtown core Monday.

At 10 a.m., an officer saw a 16-year-old wanted on several arrest warrants at Richmond Street and Queens Avenue.

The youth tried to evade the police, but was caught after a short pursuit on foot and now faces several charges.

Just before 12:30 p.m. another officer saw an alleged drug transaction at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets.

As a result, Dennis Henry, 21, has been charged with trafficking marijuana.

Then at 2:35 p.m. in the area around Clarence Street near Victoria Park, an officer saw a man known to have arrest warrants.

Levi Wear, 19, was arrested without incident. An officer determined property on the suspect had been allegedly stolen earlier from University Hospital and Masonville Mall. METRO

HIV/AIDS vaccine closer to reality

Preventative. Phase 1 of the vaccine developed at Western University and tested in the U.S.

MARK SPOWART
london@metronews.ca

Dr. Chil-Yong Kang is one step closer to eradicating HIV/AIDS.

After a successful first trial of a preventative HIV/AIDS vaccine, researchers are predicting there could be a vaccine available in five years — provided phases 2 and 3 are successful.

"Today, I am very happy to announce there were no adverse affects observed during the preliminary Phase 1 clinical trials," Kang said at a Western University news conference Tuesday.

Developed by Kang and his team at Western and supported by Sumagen Canada, the vaccine entered Phase 1 testing in the United States earlier this year. During this phase, the vaccine was administered to 24 HIV/AIDS positive patients who were monitored for any side effects.

"These tests prove the safety and efficacy of the vaccine," said Dr. Dong Joon Kim, vice-chairman of Sumagen Canada. "It encourages us at Sumagen Canada to be on the long journey to reach the final goal for all of humankind."

Together, Kang and Sumagen now will apply to the United States Food and Drug Administration for approval to commence Phase 2 trials, which will see the drug tested on 300 to 600 volunteers who — unlike patients in Phase 1 — are not HIV/AIDS positive.

"I have no doubt about the Phase 2 clinical trials," said Kang. "We already see some preliminary results showing that (the vaccine) will stimulate antibody production, so I have no problem with Phase 2. As far as Phase 3, God only knows."

A beaming Kang reflected on the possibility of eradicating the HIV/AIDS virus.

"My personal motivation is that I am a virologist and I like to save lives. That is my strongest motivation," he said. "It was Jenner (Dr. Edward Anthony Jenner) who developed the vaccine against small pox which saved millions and millions of lives over the years. If we can eradicate or prevent the HIV infection, that will be the happiest achievement I can accomplish."

Since first discovered in 1983, HIV/AIDS has claimed the lives of more than 28 million people. Today there are more than 34 million people living with the disease. While there have been numerous trials by both pharmaceutical companies and academic institutions, no vaccine has been commercialized to date.

Psychiatrist charged. London doctor accused of sexual assault, voyeurism

London police have charged a London psychiatrist with one count of sexual assault and one count of voyeurism.

Stanley Dobrowolski, 65, was arrested on Tuesday. The arrest and subsequent charges come within weeks of Dobrowolski being suspended by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

It is alleged Dobrowolski video-recorded females without their knowledge or consent during physical examinations. It is further alleged he abused the trust his patients placed in him by touching or conducting an unnecessary physical examination of a patient. Police say the offences took place in Dobrowolski's office between 2005 and 2011.

Dobrowolski was scheduled to appear in court Wednesday, where London police will request that he not be released while the investigation continues.

London police ask anyone who may have information on this case to contact them at 519-660-5842, through Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477), or online at londoncrimestoppers.com.

Gas leak forces evacuations, roadblock

London police and fire vehicles sit outside of 600 Richmond St. on Tuesday afternoon, as crews fix a gas leak on the London Chamber of Commerce's property that shut down traffic. The city's acting district fire chief, Jim Holmes, says construction workers hit a hidden gas line while digging. There were no injuries, but The Keg restaurant, Chamber building, and 600 Richmond Plaza were evacuated around 4 p.m. As well, hundreds of commuters were inconvenienced by the subsequent roadblock. Richmond was re-opened to traffic between Oxford and Pall Mall streets at about 4:30 p.m. JOHN MATISZ/METRO

Privacy concerns. Opposition slams Liberals for closing all ServiceOntario kiosks

Critics are slamming the government's decision to permanently shut down all ServiceOntario kiosks five months after concerns were raised that the machines were being targeted by criminals to steal credit and debit card information.

It shows the governing Liberals can't be trusted with delivering and overseeing even the most basic government services, the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats said Tuesday.

The machines, which provided access to 40 different services, were shut down in June after the security concerns were raised.

Closing them permanently will also inconvenience many customers who use the kiosks to access services quickly, such as address changes and renewing licence plate stickers, rather than wait in line, the parties said.

Councillor ducking queries about email

'Duck off.' Remark from Coun. Stephen Orser won't discourage engaged citizen

JOHN MATISZ

Brian Gibson METRO FILE

Stephen Orser METRO FILE

Brian Gibson's blog traffic zoomed up the charts late Monday night — for the wrong reason.

Over the course of a couple of hours, the latest post on his personal website, zone0f-silence.com, garnered nearly 1,000 views. It continued into the morning, mainly because Londoners wanted to see for themselves if a local leader had really said "Duck off" in an email to the 27-year-old.

"To me, that signals there's a lot of interest and it's an issue people feel strongly about," said Gibson, of his blog's sudden burst in popularity. "It's very encouraging."

London city Coun. Stephen Orser (Ward 4) hit send after typing "Duck off," and nothing else, in response to a well-mannered email directed to all members of council regarding an online petition organized by Gibson. The petition, hosted by change.org, asks Joe Fontana to step down as mayor while the RCMP continues its investigation into allegations of misuse of public funds as an MP in 2005.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Orser — who Gibson claims had never interacted with him prior to the email exchange — has not fulfilled a request from Gibson asking for clarification on the two-word response, nor did he return calls from Metro.

Even though the computer drafter is one of many citizens vocal about council's perceived misbehaviour lately — "another brick in a very ugly wall," as Gibson puts it — he's hoping all of the drama will eventually result in the hiring of a city hall watchdog.

If an integrity commissioner position existed at city hall, Gibson could file a complaint against Orser for treating him with disrespect. Without one, there's little he can do.

"Right now, I feel a little powerless that there's nothing we can do with no ability to take recourse," Gibson said. "There's nothing to stop him from making comments like this."

Gibson, in tune with municipal politics as a member of Citizen Corps and other local engagement groups, says at first he hesitated in sharing the blunt email from Orser since he didn't want to add to the growing angst towards council members.

But, ultimately, he felt the conversation needed to be shared.

"I think at first, yeah, it was very tempting to throw up my hands and say "Ya know what? This isn't worth it.' But you have to put it in perspective," said Gibson, when asked if he's been discouraged from staying involved in groups such as Citizen Corps.

Tyrannosaurus Sex

Orser isn't the first politician to mention an animal when trying make a point.

- "They don't call me Tyrannosaurus Sex for nothing," said U.S. senator Ted Kennedy, while wearing a Barney costume at a Christmas party in 1993.
- "When I take action, I'm not going to fire a $2-million missile at a $10 empty tent and hit a camel in the butt. It's going to be decisive," quipped U.S. president George W. Bush, talking to the press two days after 9-11 in 2001.

Outrage. Out-of-line comments about rape knock out candidates

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

Some controversial comments about rape didn't pay off for two Republican Senate candidates.

Both Missouri Republican Todd Akin and Indiana Republican Richard Mourdock failed in their Senate races on Tuesday.

Akin was considered a strong candidate until a controversial interview in August in which he said that women's bodies have ways of avoiding pregnancy in instances of "legitimate rape."

"The female body has ways to try to shut that whole thing down," Akin said at the time.

Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill, who supports abortion rights, was re-elected.

After Akin's controversial comments, Republican leaders, including Mitt Romney, called on him to abandon the race, but he refused.

In Indiana, Democrat Joe Donnelly defeated Republican Richard Mourdock, who had slipped in the polls after saying during a debate that when a woman who is raped becomes pregnant it's what "God intended."

"I, too, certainly stand for life," Mourdock said in the October debate.

"I know that there are some who disagree, and I respect their point of view, but I believe that life begins at conception. The only exception I have to have an abortion is in that case of the life of the mother.

Richard Mourdock said pregnancy after rape is what God intended. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I struggled with it myself for a long time but I came to realize that life is a gift from God, and I think that even when life begins in that horrible situation of rape that it is something God intended to happen."

The Indiana seat had been held for six six-year terms by Sen. Richard Lugar, whom Mourdock defeated in the primary.

Donnelly's win handed it to the Democratic Party.

Victory in his sights? U.S. President Barack Obama calls out to his supporters on Tuesday morning. CAROLYN KASTER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Obama does it!

Race for the White House. The lead switches a number of times all night, but U.S. president finally triumphs in historic election

Quoted

"I feel like we put it all on the field. We left nothing in the locker-room. We fought to the very end."

Mitt Romney,
Speaking to reporters on his plane as he flew to Boston on Tuesday.

He'll finish what he started.

President Barack Obama, who sought four more years to get the job done, won the White House in a gut-wrenching, intensely tight battle Tuesday night.

And it was the economy, stupid.

Voters across America chose him as the man who'll best fix the nation's troubled financial state and its high unemployment.

In one of the hardest-fought campaigns in recent history, challenger Mitt Romney, the 65-year-old former Massachusetts governor, battled until the bitter end,

The two rivals were close in the popular vote.

Romney had 45.2 million votes, or 49 per cent. Obama had 45 million, also 49 per cent, with 65 per cent of precincts tallied.

But Obama's laser-like focus on battleground states gave him the majority in the electoral vote, where it mattered most.

He had 284, or 14 more than needed for victory. Romney had 200.

All night the lead kept switching back and forth.

Obama won the reliably Democratic Northeast, and Romney secured his conservative base.

But the critical battlegrounds with the key to victory were unsettled late into the night — Virginia, Ohio and Florida among them — and, astonishingly, some voters were still waiting in long lines late Tuesday.

Romney also held an early electoral vote advantage, 159-147, with 270 needed for victory — although he lost his home state of Michigan as well as Massachusetts, where he served as governor.

The high turnout of African-American voters in Pennsylvania — reportedly even higher than it was in 2008 — was thought to have played a critical role in the president's victory there.

In Chicago, Obama's supporters were overjoyed even though he was yet to officially win the White House.

The president was on his way, along with his wife, Michelle, to address the crowd at his downtown headquarters in the Windy City.

Glitches couldn't block democracy's path

It wasn't exactly mayhem, But sporadic problems were reported at polling places around the United States.

A confrontation broke out in Pennsylvania involving Republican inspectors over access to some polls.

Also in Pennsylvania, a voting machine lit up for Mitt Romney even when a voter pressed the button for President Barack Obama.

Video of what an official called a "momentary glitch" was widely viewed on YouTube.

One Florida elections office mistakenly told voters in robocalls that the election was on Wednesday.

In Philadelphia, a judge ordered a mural of Obama covered up after a Republican election worker snapped a picture of it at a school polling place.

There were reported problems with ballot scanners in the Ohio cities of Cleveland, Dayton and Toledo.

Polling places opened late in minority neighbourhoods in Galveston, Texas.

Voters in several storm-ravaged areas in New York and New Jersey expressed relief at being able to vote at all, considering the devastation from Superstorm Sandy.

"Nothing is more important than voting. What is the connection between voting and this?" said Alex Shamis, a resident of hard-hit Staten Island, pointing to his mud-filled home.

Indian government warns Harper of Sikh extremism

Urging vigilance. Prime ministers talk terrorism, nuclear energy during stop on six-day trade trip

The Indian government issued a pointed and public warning to Prime Minister Stephen Harper to mind what they see as alarming evidence of Sikh extremism on Canadian soil.

Harper is usually the one to urge vigilance over extremism and terrorism as he travels the world meeting with his counterparts, but on Tuesday the shoe was on the other foot during a meeting in India's capital with India's minister of state for external affairs Preneet Kaur.

"Prime minister, there was another area of great concern for us, which was the revival of anti-India rhetoric in Canada, and I am from the state of Punjab, which we are very happy you will be visiting," Kaur said during a morning meeting.

"We have after very hard times got a good situation of peace and progress back in Punjab and in India and we would like that to continue ... we do appreciate very much that you have been forthright and open about your stand on this."

Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh touched on the issue again during an evening ceremony.

"India and Canada are nations built on shared values that celebrate democracy, inclusiveness and diversity," said Singh. "We have similar concerns in combating terrorism, extremism and radicalism."

Canada had wanted more oversight over where the products wound up, something India had resisted. Now, a joint committee will ensure that Canada gets the kind of follow-up it had required.

Harper told reporters Tuesday that Canada was satisfied with the checks and balances it gets under the deal. THE CANADIAN PRESS

RCMP. It Gets Better video aimed at gay youth

An emotional video by gay and lesbian RCMP officers and civilian employees has been released with a message to young people that life does get better.

The nine-minute It Gets Better video features 20 participants who tell their stories about when they realized they were gay and how their friends and family reacted, ranging from open acceptance to harsh bullying in school.

The video was the brainchild of the Surrey RCMP's youth unit and was filmed this past summer.

One officer recalls his mother crying when he told her he was leaving the priesthood because he was gay, while another recalls his family telling him it was "just a phase."

But the participants say eventually it did get better, and they speak about the acceptance they now experience among their families and at work.

The It Gets Better campaign was launched by U.S. sex columnist Dan Savage in response to anti-gay bullying and it has inspired videos from celebrities, politicians and everyday people.

Gunmen killed the brother of Syria's parliament speaker in a hail of bullets as he drove to work in Damascus on Tuesday, the state news agency said, as the international envoy for Syria warned the country could become another Somalia.

Mohammed Osama Laham, the brother of Parliament Speaker Jihad Laham, became the latest victim of a wave of assassinations targeting Syrian officials, army officers and other prominent supporters of President Bashar Assad's regime. Four of the leader's top security officials were killed in a rebel bombing on the state security headquarters in Damascus in July.

Laham was gunned down in the Damascus neighbourhood of Midan, the SANA state news agency said. The killing came a day after some of the most intense fighting in Damascus in months as rebels wage a civil war to unseat Assad.

The government and activists said a series of explosions Tuesday evening rocked the northwestern edge of Damascus. At least 13 people were killed and 30 wounded.

Why rookie investors shouldn't fear stocks

Personal finance. This is the first of three columns on getting into the stock market

IN THE MARKET
Bryan Borzykowski
For Metro

If you're hoarding cash rather than investing it, you're losing money, says columnist Bryan Borzykowski. In the first of a three-part series, he aims to convince investing newbies that equities aren't so frightening. ISTOCK

For most of the last century, investing in the stock market has been a great way to make money. That's because share prices have mostly gone up.

Of course, someone who lost their retirement savings during the recession doesn't want to hear that. While the markets have mostly recovered since the economic crisis, many people still want nothing to do with equities.

These days, most people are keeping their money in bonds, high-interest savings accounts or under a mattress, which is precisely where you don't want your cash to be. Investments must grow faster than inflation or you end up losing money. Right now, inflation is around two per cent, while a 10-year Government of Canada bond is paying 1.8 per cent. You get nothing for storing your money on a shelf at home.

Despite what you saw in the crisis, the stock market isn't a scary place. There are plenty of low-risk places for conservative investors to stash some dough, such as in brand name, dividend-paying stocks. While it's true that equities will always be riskier than bonds, in today's low-interest rate environment, barely paying fixed-income has become risky too.

The beauty of the stock market is that anyone can buy in, even if you only have $20 a month to save. Banks will take just about anyone at any income level; some larger firms require a $500,000 investment or more before they'll take a client on. While you can get access to different investment options — such as real estate or hedge funds — if you have more money, the point is that you don't need to be rich to invest.

You also don't need to know much about the markets. Investing newbies can purchase mutual funds — securities that hold a basket of stocks — through an adviser. Savvier investors may buy stocks online. The earlier you start the better, though. The longer your funds are left to grow the more money you'll make.

The only people who should stay away from the markets are those who can't stomach any risk at all. Even the most conservative equity investor will see their portfolios fall from time to time. If you can't fathom seeing a negative number, then maybe the mattress is right for you.

As history has proven time and time again, though, markets do rise. It may take a while before the volatility we're experiencing today dies down, but it will. Either get in now, when stocks are cheap, or hope that wad of cash you're hoarding somehow finds a way to reproduce.

Investors to watch

Follow the advice of these famous investors and watch your returns rise:

Warren Buffett The Oracle of Omaha got rich by buying undervalued companies. It's called value investing. You buy a business that no one wants, which makes it cheap. When people eventually buy in, the stock price soars.

Peter Lynch This famous investor perfected the Growth at a Reasonable Price approach. He wants undervalued companies that are also growing earnings. Find a value stock that's growing and you've got yourself a winner.

Prem Watsa The CEO of Toronto's Fairfax Financial has been called the Canadian Warren Buffet. He's also made his millions buying undervalued companies. Like any good investor, he's focused on long-term returns, not short-term gains.

FACT: NICE GUYS FINISH FIRST

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

There's hope for me yet.

Not just me, but millions of Guys.

Guys: You know who you are. You are impervious to all the recent trends toward humanization. Sensitive New Age Guy? Metrosexual? Fuggedaboutit. Emotions are like kryptonite or cockroaches. They need to be removed from the room to make it safe for football, video games, hot wings and the other essentials of Guy life.

Well, turns out that getting in touch with our feelings is not only trendy, it's also good for us.

Huh? (The universally-recognized Guy response to any complex thought.)

A Harvard study that's been going on since 1938 has found that relationships (eeyeww), not genes or birth order or political affiliation are the best indicator of how well men will do throughout their lives. The Grant Study, as it's known (who heads up Grant's study?) has followed 268 Harvard students through their entire lives.

Emotional long haul

Here's the bottom line, Guys. Of those participants who have the capacity for intimate relationships, one third are still alive. Of those who don't? Four miserable S.O.Bs.

Here's the bottom line, Guys. Of those participants who have the capacity for intimate relationships, one third are still alive. Of those who don't? Four miserable S.O.Bs.

Around our place, it's generally assumed I'll be the last crotchety old coot standing while my dutiful offspring are drawing straws to see who gets to put up with me after the authorities have washed their hands. But if this Grant Study is any indication, they'll have nothing to worry about. I'll die young (well, youngish), the tragic victim of emotional constipation. Like the end of a Clint Eastwood movie.

But wait! It doesn't have to be that way. The researchers have documented what should be called the Ebenezer Scrooge Effect. Somewhere along the line, a few lucky Guys discover their emotions, and become interesting.

The New York Times' story on the study features a Guy who worked night shifts to put himself through school, then biked to class first thing in the morning. He probably had to plow his way through seven-foot snowdrifts, too, like the rest of us Guys. By the time he was 40, he was a burnout: "Mediocre and without imagination." Then, in his old age, he went back to his first love, theatre, got married at 78, and by the time he was 86, got down to a single medication: Viagra. He died at 96 from having too much fun.

The title of the research is called Triumphs of Experience.

What doesn't kill you can make you glad to be here. And ready for someone who wants to share your secret and doesn't care if you start to cry during the part where Clint finally sees the light. Just before he takes the bullet meant for …

Clint Eastwood arrives at the Trouble with the Curve premiere in September. It's a film about an aging baseball scout who takes his daughter on one last recruiting trip. So there's still hope for all you Guys. GETTY IMAGES

VIP rhinos get their own bodyguards

Sought-after horns

Protection from poachers

Rhinos Najin and Suni are pictured grazing under 24-hour protection as part of a conservation program in Kenya.

The northern white rhino species is extinct in the wild with just seven remaining under protection due to poaching gangs. Rhino horns are in high demand because of the mistaken belief that they cure fevers and other illnesses. METRO

Rhino ambassadors

"It's impossible to say what proportion of poached rhinos is left alive and wounded."

Ann and Steve Toon, wildlife photographers and Save the Rhino activists
The British couple took the picture above on a tour of rhino conservation projects in Africa, while also documenting the slaughter of the animals.

Also killed for parts:

- Sumatran tiger. Famous striped fur coats are an expensive commodity and just 400 of the species remain, following the extinction of Javan and Balinese relatives.
- Northern right whale. Just a few hundred of these giants of the Atlantic have survived hunters seeking their oil. Their name comes from being the easiest whale to catch.

White gold

$133

The estimated price in U.S. dollars of a gram of powdered rhino horn — making it more valuable than gold or cocaine. This reflects a massive growth in demand — in 1980, a kilogram would sell for around $500 US.

Daniel Day-Lewis' portrayal of Abraham Lincoln has him as an early Oscar favourite this year. DAVID JAMES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Day-Lewis filling big shoes in character and competition

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Mark S. Reinhart, author of Abraham Lincoln on Screen, claims the 16th President of the United States, "is the most frequently portrayed American historical figure in the history of the film and television arts."

Portrayed more than 300 times on film and TV, Honest Abe has done everything from pardon a sentry who fell asleep on duty in the 1908 short film The Reprieve: An Episode in the Life of Abraham Lincoln, to getting revenge on his assassin in Police Squad to teaming up with Star Trek's Captain Kirk to explain the concepts of good and evil to the aliens of Excalbia. In this weekend's Lincoln, starring Daniel Day-Lewis, the president oversees the passing of the 13th Amendment, guaranteeing freedom for the country's slaves and ending the Civil War. Day-Lewis is a lock for an Oscar nomination, and a favorite to win, but his portrayal stands in the shadow of two movie legends.

Henry Fonda played the title character in Young Mr. Lincoln, a melodramatic and inaccurate chronicle of Abe's formative years.

Wearing specially made boots that made him appear taller, Fonda was honoured to play the president.

"I felt as if I were portraying Christ himself on film," he said.

Canadian-born Raymond Massey played Lincoln multiple times on stage and film.

He was so attached to the character a colleague joked that Massey wouldn't be satisfied with his Lincoln impression until someone assassinated him. For a certain generation, however, Lincoln might be best remembered for a speech that began with, "Fourscore and seven minutes ago…" and ended with, "Party on, dudes!"

But Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure isn't the only movie to take a light-hearted look at the Great Emancipator.

In Coneheads, Dan Aykroyd's character uses Abe's famous stovepipe top hat to cover his oblong head.

One of Brendan Fraser's seven wishes in Bedazzled is to be president.

But he soon learns to be careful what he wishes for when he is zapped back into history as Lincoln himself as he watches a play at Ford's Theatre. Abe also gets a laugh in Night at the Museum: Battle of the Smithsonian when the Lincoln Memorial comes to life.

Perhaps the strangest portrayal came earlier this year. Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter is exactly as advertised, leading one critic to call it, "a funny, scary, and cheer-worthy adventure that somehow manages to make the 16th President of the United States a bad-ass action hero."

When a terrorist hacker leads a deadly cyber attack on MI6 headquarters, 007 (Daniel Craig) springs into action at the request of his boss and mentor M (Judy Dench). His investigation leads him to Raoul Silva (Javier Bardem), a psychotic criminal interested in revenge.

Skyfall is the most thematically mature Bond movie yet, paying homage to the past, while redefining the future of the franchise. It's also the most purely entertaining Bond in ages, with a bad guy for a new generation and a heady mix of action and intellect that will leave you shaken and stirred.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

I'm voting for:

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

In honour of the U.S. presidential election, The Word decided to cast a vote for their favourite celebrity causes.

I vote:

… for Amanda Bynes to report to rehab, directly to rehab, do not pass go, do not collect $200.

… for Johnny Depp to buy some eye makeup remover.

… for Britney Spears to keep on hiring whomever she's employing to make her seem sane. They are doing a pretty bang-up job.

… for Beyoncé and Jay-Z to keep breeding.

… for Ashton Kutcher to stop following in the footsteps of Charlie Sheen.

... for more Michael Fassbender — with or without pants on. Where did that guy get to?

… for Christina Aguilera to not feel pressure to go crazy on the elliptical. You look good just the way you are, girl.

...for Matthew McConaughey's ongoing research into ways to reveal his chest on camera.

… for Ryan Reynolds to join Matrimonials Anonymous and admit he really just likes taking part in weddings.

… for Nicole Kidman to burn this dress immediately

Jack Nicholson

Nicholson: I'm no sex machine

Jack Nicholson isn't a fan of his reputation as a Hollywood Lothario.

"I am an extreme person. If someone says, 'Jack, you are a womanizer,' I don't deny it. But the life of a gigolo always ends badly," the 75-year-old Oscar-winner tells the Sun. "That is one of the reasons I feel uncomfortable about all that 'sex legend' stuff." Nicholson also says that reports of his conquests — he's rumored to have bedded more than 2,000 women — are greatly exaggerated.

Lindsay Lohan

Lohan could go to jail ... again

One of Lindsay Lohan's recent run-ins with the law is coming back to haunt her — and it could mean jail time.

The troubled actress was involved in a car accident over the summer, and at the time she told the police she had been a passenger in the car and not the driver despite witness accounts to the contrary. Now, the Santa Monica City Attorney is reportedly planning to file the case as a misdemeanor this week, according to TMZ.

And as Lohan is still on probation, a charge of lying to police is enough to send Lohan back to jail, though it likely won't be for very long.

Alley talks about love of Swayze

It's never too late to tell the truth, apparently. Kirstie Alley has revealed that she and the late Patrick Swayze began an "intense emotional relationship" while filming the 1985 miniseries North and South, according to Entertainment Tonight.

"Both of us were married," Alley explains, adding that she wouldn't call what happened between them "an affair," exactly. "But again, I think what we did was worse," she says. "Because I think when you fall in love with someone when you're married, you jeopardize your own marriage and their marriage. It's doubly bad."

Alley says that she's not sure if Swayze's widow, Lisa Niemi — with whom she's still friends — was aware to the relationship before now.

5 Breaks from Christmas

With the Halloween candy barely eaten and Christmas carols already playing in the mall, you might be thinking of skipping out on the holiday stress. Here are a few ideas for destinations that are mercifully Christmas-free.

EMMA E. FORREST
Metro World News

1 Visit the Muslim Marrakesh, Morocco

Why? This atmospheric, iconic Moroccan city with its pink ramparts feels pretty festive all year round, and Christmas is a non-event here because Morocco is mainly a Muslim country.

How? By day, lose yourself in the warren of the maze-like old town, haggle over carpets in the sprawling Souk al-Madina, then unwind in a roasting hammam. By night, snack on street food for supper from the steaming stalls that are set up every night in the central square, Jemaa el-Fnaa, enjoy a tasting menu in a chic hotel, or hang out in one of the glossy nightclubs and cocktail bars in the new town. Head to the souk for leather pouffes, spices and traditional pointed slippers in soft leather in Africa's largest indoor market. visitmorocco.com

2 Health boot-camp in Thailand

Why? Instead of piling on the pounds at a family feast, lose them at a Thai detox spa instead.

How? Thailand is a mainly Buddhist country so you won't see Santa everywhere here, and besides, you'll find it hard to care when your cleanse kicks in. On the detox cleansing retreat at Samui Spa on the idyllic island of Koh Samui, you'll enjoy daily yoga and a purification of your insides. thesparesorts.net/samui, tourismthailand.org.

3 Change the date for Christmas in Moscow, Russia

Why? The Russian Orthodox Christmas isn't until Jan. 7, so you get two whole weeks in which to give Christmas craziness the slip.

How? If you like your winters white and your cities atmospheric, then Moscow is a top choice. You can skip Christmas here, but you do get the mother of all parties for New Years — when you can see 2013 by fuelling yourself with local vodka and joining the locals as they gather in Red Square to hear the Kremlin's bells peal.

4 Escape to a paradise island, Vietnam

Why? If you're looking to escape the crowds, cold weather and commercialism, escape to the tropical paradise island of Phu Quoc in the Gulf of Thailand.

How? Vietnam's largest island, Phu Quoc, is an undiscovered gem. It's also home to Vietnam's finest fish sauce and an exceptional place to eat fresh seafood. Hole up at luxurious but laidback Chen Sea Resort and Spa on the island's idyllic west coast. Learn how to cook the perfect prawn with their Iron Chef-contestant head chef, who will take you to buy ingredients at the buzzing local market first. centarahotels-resorts.com

5 Take a silent retreat at Mount Koya, Japan

Why? Tokyo may be lit up like a Christmas tree at this time of year and heaving with shoppers, but you can also go for a deeper and less superficial experience at Mount Koya, Japan.

How? Stay at the ninth century monastery at the top of Mount Koya, two hours from Osaka, and you can trade commercialism for spiritualism. Fifty-three of the 120 temples here in this exquisite woodland wilderness host guests in traditional shukubo lodgings with rice-paper sliding doors, tatami mats and futons; some with private gardens complete with bonsai trees. You'll eat traditional Buddhist vegetarian food and can experience zazen, a type of meditation practiced by the monks here. shukubo.jp/eng

Autumn flavours get baked in Cardamom Cranberry Pear Crisp

This recipe serves eight. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ground cardamom gives this simple fall-friendly crisp a sweet-spicy flavour that you will smell as much as taste.

Don't worry too much about which type of oats to use in a recipe such as this. Though old fashioned rolled oats are the best, feel free to use the "quick" variety if that's what you happen to have. The differences won't be tremendous.

Ingredients

Topping
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, room temperature
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 3/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup oats (see above)
- 1/2 tsp cinnamon
- 1/4 tsp salt

Filling
- 8 pears, peeled, cored and sliced
- 8-oz package frozen or fresh cranberries
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 tsp ground cardamom
- 1/4 tsp salt
- 2 tsp cornstarch

1. Heat the oven to 400 F. Coat a 9-by-9-inch pan with cooking spray.

2. To make the topping, in a medium bowl use an electric mixer to beat together the butter and brown sugar until creamy. Add the flour, oats, cinnamon and salt. Stir together until the mixture just forms moistened crumbs and small clumps. Set aside.

3. To make the filling, in a medium bowl, toss together the pears, cranberries, brown sugar, cardamom, salt and cornstarch.

4. Spread mixture evenly into the prepared pan. Sprinkle the topping evenly over the filling. Bake for about 1 hour, or until the pears are tender and bubbling and the topping is well browned. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Campus time can make resumés shine

Beyond the books. Your post-secondary experience can provide you with much more than a piece of paper

KELSEY GOFORTH
TalentEgg.ca

The university experience is comprised of various different aspects of social and scholastic life.

Looking back on my time at the University of Toronto, I realized that, for many of those years, I didn't take full advantage of everything higher education had to offer.

As I entered my fourth year, however, I decided that things would change. I made a pledge to myself to step out of my comfort zone, try new things and hopefully become a more well-rounded person.

University or college is not only about reading textbooks or writing essays, but also provides you with vital skills and experiences which can be used later on, mainly in a career environment.

For most of my time at school, I only focused on academia and maintaining friendships with the people I had known from my hometown. Yet, I decided for my fourth and final year, I would make an attempt to meet new people with similar interests and get more involved in the topics that interest me.

I have found that the initiative taken in my final year has given me not only the opportunity to have new experiences, but also a fresh perspective on the career path I am pursuing.

Join a club

Joining a club at school is not only a great way to meet new people, but also an easy way to develop leadership and communication skills. These skills make you a more confident person, but more importantly, they make you more hireable.

The club that I joined at the U of T was the United Nations development program. I applied on a whim and landed an executive position as a project manager of the women's empowerment initiative. I assisted in the planning of an International Women's Day event, delivered speeches and presentations and met with potential new members.

As a result of my involvement with this club, I improved my ability to communicate with others, especially in front of large audiences. Furthermore, I now have experience in project management and taking on leadership roles.

Get a job on campus

As a student, you often find yourself very broke but also very busy. While people often need part-time jobs during their time at university, finding such positions can be inconvenient. A solution to this is working on campus.

Working on campus is a great opportunity to become more familiar with your school, faculty and programs. One suggestion is working as a research assistant for a professor. In this job, you not only get experience in the field of your choice, you also gain a great academic reference. Having hands-on experience early on will help you confirm whether or not you are on the right path career-wise.

For instance, early on in university, I had planned on eventually going to law school. However, as I got acquainted with professors and professionals who work in fields such as international development, I came to realize that it was a more appropriate path for me. This was useful in that I began to feel comfortable enough to abandon my earlier plan and fully embrace a new one.

Union concludes Cabrera's agents unaware of Internet scheme

The baseball players' union concluded Melky Cabrera's agents didn't know about a scheme to create a phoney website in a defence of his positive drug test but said they failed to properly manage the employees of the firm who tried to carry out the scheme.

Brothers Sam and Seth Levinson, the heads of ACES Inc., were probed by the Major League Baseball Players Association after MLB's investigations department discovered the attempt to concoct evidence. Cabrera, the all-star game MVP, was suspended 50 games in August after testing positive for testosterone.

Fehr optimistic as negotiations resume

Back to the table. League, players attempt to bridge gap in New York on lockout's 52nd day

Quoted

"We're hopeful that we'll start bargaining and we'll continue bargaining until we find a way to make a deal."

NHLPA executive director Donald Fehr ahead of Tuesday's negotiations

As the NHL and NHL Players' Association resumed bargaining for the first time in more than two weeks, Donald Fehr expressed optimism that the sides were ready to start working towards a deal.

"The players' view has always been that we ought to keep negotiating until we find a way to get an agreement," the NHLPA's executive director said Tuesday. "You sort of stay at it day by day — so it's very good to be getting back to the table. We hope that this time it produces more progress than we've seen in the past and we can figure out a way to make an agreement and to get the game back on the ice as soon as possible."

The talks again went underground with the parties meeting at an undisclosed New York location.

However, Fehr agreed to meet with reporters about 90 minutes before negotiations resumed. It was the first formal session between the sides since Oct. 18 and Fehr expressed hope that it would be the start of a push to end the lockout.

A number of players and owners made their way to New York for the meetings. Pittsburgh Penguins captain Sidney Crosby was among 13 NHLPA members to take part after making a "last-minute" decision to fly in.

The biggest issue the sides have to bridge a gap on is the mechanism that would see all existing contracts honoured in full, even after the players' overall share in revenue is reduced to 50 per cent from its current position of 57 per cent. A "make whole" provision in the NHL's Oct. 16 offer attempted to do that, but the NHLPA didn't like that deferred payments would count against the earning potential of future players. Jays not suffering without a skipper, Anthopoulos says

MLB. But GM pledges to have manager in place before baseball's winter meetings

Blue Jays general manager Alex Anthopoulos. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

Blue Jays general manager Alex Anthopoulos says not having a manager in place hasn't hindered his off-season free-agent and trade negotiations, but he'd still like to hire a new bench boss "sooner rather than later."

"I'd like to get it done as soon as I can, but we're not going to force it or have it rushed."

The manager vacancy has "come up" in discussions with free agents, Anthopoulos said. "But so far, I haven't seen it be a problem. I haven't seen it be an issue in terms of potentially signing free agents and things like that. I think it's only normal in conversation it would come up, but it hasn't been a stumbling block at all."

The search for a new manager will slow down this week as Anthopoulos heads to California on Wednesday for the annual GM meetings, which run until Friday.

Assuming the Washington Nationals soon work out a deal to keep Davey Johnson, the Jays and Colorado Rockies will be the only major-league clubs without managers.

Anthopoulos said he has no timeline on hiring a new manager, but it will "definitely" be before baseball's winter meetings, which will be held from Dec. 3 to 6 in Nashville, Tenn.

"I don't know when, but I definitely feel like we're starting to get closer," he said. "We're getting there, we're making progress."

The Jays' managerial post was vacated just over two weeks ago when John Farrell was relieved of his contract as part of a trade with the Boston Red Sox, where Farrell previously worked as pitching coach.

It was later revealed that Farrell had twice asked Anthopoulos for the opportunity to pursue managing in Boston.

Speaking with Torstar News Service on Tuesday, Anthopoulos declined to name potential candidates for Farrell's old post or even say how many are on the list for consideration.

"It's easier to work quietly when there's not as much speculation," he said. "Honestly, there's a lot of people and candidates that would rather have their names kept out of it unless they get the job, for obvious reasons."

Perceived front-runners include Cleveland bench coach Sandy Alomar Jr. and Baltimore third-base coach DeMarlo Hale — both interviewed by the Jays in 2010 — as well as Dodgers third-base coach Tim Wallach, Diamondbacks third-base coach Matt Williams and Jays bench coach Don Wakamatsu, among others.

Anthopoulos said the "format and style" of his manager search this time around is very different than it was in 2010, when he cast a much wider net.

"It's much more specific now," he said, adding that he hasn't re-interviewed candidates who were considered two years ago. "The work has been more about the people I didn't get a chance to speak to."

Moving without a manager

The Jays already made one deal last weekend without a manager, swapping depth players Mike Aviles and Yan Gomes to Cleveland for another hard-throwing bullpen arm in Esmil Rogers.

Longtime coach named CSA's technical director

The Canadian Soccer Association has named Tony Fonseca its new technical director.

Fonseca is a longtime staff coach for the association. He has coached Canada's under-20 and under-23 clubs, and most recently has been an assistant coach with the senior squad. The post of technical director has been vacant since Stephen Hart left it to take over as national team coach. He stepped down as coach last month.

The CSA says Fonseca will be responsible for the overall management and direction of the technical growth and development of soccer in Canada.

Get ready for the Ram 1500

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASE

There is a dash-mounted gear knob for eight-speed models.

Engine

Chrysler has finally decided to install its 3.6-litre V6 and eight-speed automatic transmission between the Ram's flanks, replacing the 3.7-litre V6. The result is a significant 90-horsepower gain (to 305) and a torque increase to 269 pound-feet from 235. The new powertrain makes a world of difference.

Ram 1500

- Type. Two/Four-door, rear/four-wheel drive.
- Engines (hp); 3.6-litre DOHC V6 (305), 4.7-litre SOHC V8 (310), 5.7-litre OHV V8 (395)
- Transmission. Eight speed auto., six speed auto. (4.7).
- Base price (incl.destination). $28,500

Design

Outwardly, the new Ram's forward-angled grille juts out as before, like an overbite, and fronts the same cab and box sizes. However, the nose is now 2.5 centimetres higher, the headlights are updated and the grille can be specified with fuel-saving shutters that automatically close at highway speeds.

Fuel economy

For fuel-saving measures, a thermal management system rapidly warms engine and transmission fluids, allowing them to function more efficiently, sooner, which also helps save gas. Then there's a stop-start system that shuts off the engine (while still maintaining necessary electric-powered systems) when stationary.

Review. Modifications say Ram is taking its future seriously

MALCOLM GUNN
Wheelbase Media

The changes were really a long-time coming.

The 2013 Ram 1500 arrives with enough new content engineered into its soul to gain plenty of traction with the tough pickup crowd. Whether it's enough to entice Ford and General Motors supporters to join the Ram flock remains to be seen, but as the nation's economic health remains relatively strong, so should the fortunes of all light and medium-duty truck brands.

Now operating as its own unit apart from Chrysler's Dodge division, the Ram brand — specifically the 1500 series — receives some critical mid-product-cycle adjustments that are significant on a number of fronts. Carrying over, and exclusive to the job-site Tradesmen model, is a 310-horsepower 4.7-litre V8 connected to a six-speed automatic transmission.

Rams fitted with the eight-speed come with a rotary shift dial on the lower left corner of the centre stack, replacing the previous column or console-mounted shifter. The interior also features an available touch-screen access for communications and audio devices as well as for Wi-Fi Internet access.

Further changes to the Ram involve adopting a stiffened frame that's also lighter by about 14 kilograms. Alone that's not much, but combined with a lighter base powertrain and front suspension and the combined savings reaches the 60-kilogram range.

The Ram also becomes the first in its class to offer key-fob-controlled air suspension on Quad and Crew models that features five ride height settings. In addition, the Ram makes giant strides in areas that matter most while actually improving power and towing capacity, things that make people want to buy trucks in the first place.

Ping-pong precision: Ford gets ball rolling

JIL MCINTOSH
Drive@metronews.ca

You may think of ping-pong balls as being strictly for games.

But at Ford, the company has found a new use for them: As measuring devices in storage compartments.

"A few years ago, we were trying to come up with a good way to measure some of our vehicles," says Sejal Shreffler, Ford Accommodation and Usage Engineer, based in Dearborn, Michigan. "We were brainstorming to come up with alternatives, and someone suggested ping-pong balls, so we tried it. It was a good way to measure some of the odd-shaped storage in vehicles."

The company was using measuring tapes, taking the length and width to figure out volume, but many storage compartments have odd shapes. As a result, two people could measure the same compartment but come up with different numbers.

To use the ping-pong balls, the engineers developed a cubic measurement for each ball that also accounted for the space in between them.

By using this measurement over the number of ping-pong balls that fit into a storage compartment, they come up with an accurate total volume of the area.

"We've done some work in measuring it in 3D environments and using the ping-pong balls, we're able to get really accurate results," Shreffler says. "We do measure our own vehicles, but primarily, we put them in competitors' vehicles to get an understanding of how big some of their storage compartments are, so we can do better benchmarking."

Other areas

- Gulp. As cup sizes increase, so do cupholder sizes, although Ford admits that "there is a limit" on the largest sizes that can be accommodated.
- Lighting up. Although they're not found in Canadian vehicles anymore, the company still designs ashtrays into its vehicles for some global markets.

For smaller storage spaces, the company uses computer-aided design (CAD), or even a measuring tape, but the ping-pong balls have proven to be one of the easiest and most accurate methods for larger ones.

Storage compartments are very important to buyers, and like most companies, Ford identifies the top items that people bring into the vehicle and design the vehicle's console and other storage areas so they will be handy for the driver.

"Cell phones are the big thing," Shreffler says. "When I first started here, we never considered anything like that, but now everyone has some sort of cell phone or smart phone. Now there are a lot of electronic devices that we didn't consider before, but we have to now, such as iPads."

Ford uses balls to see how much large compartments can hold. BOTH PHOTOS HANDOUT

The balls give the company a more accurate reading than anything else.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may want to give up on something that does not seem to be working out, but don't be too hasty. A few days from now, you will get an idea as to how you can further develop it. Stick with it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Something seems to be holding you back from fully expressing yourself. Whatever that something is, you need to identify it and deal with it because your voice is going to be needed towards the end of the week.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The more others try to tell you there is nothing to worry about, the more the alarm bells in your head start to ring. Are you being overly dramatic? No you are not. Be on your guard over the next 24 hours.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may find this hard to believe but what happens today will sweep away your fears and before you know it, the world will be a brighter, happier place — for you at least. This is still very much your time of year.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
By all means, listen to what other people try to tell you today. But when it comes to acting on what they say, you must be cautious. There is a small but worrying possibility that you are being lied to.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
There is no point giving into feelings of self-pity because they won't get you anywhere. A positive mental attitude is a must today, and for the rest of the week. You won't get much done without it.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It may now be apparent that someone who acts like a friend is in fact plotting against you but there is no need to get excited about it. What have they so far achieved? Nothing. And that's how it will stay.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It is too late to change the outcome of a certain situation, and the sooner you realize that, the better. Don't waste time and energy trying to reverse what has already happened. Unless you own a time machine, it won't work.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be able to see where a friend or family member is going wrong but it's unlikely they will be happy if you point it out to them. Do so anyway, so your conscience is clear. After that, it's up to them.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may have to make some kind of sacrifice today but if you do so willingly, it is guaranteed that you will gain in other ways before the end of the week. Don't forget: A good heart is also good business.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
It may seem as if nothing is going right but don't let it get to you. Take each moment as it comes and focus on one task at a time. You'll get at least one good thing done by the end of the day.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You would no doubt admit that you have gone along with other people's suggestions a bit too much in recent weeks. Now you must resolve only to do what feels right to you. It's your life after all.
